Dear FACT readers,

Spring has just come bringing hints of new life and love. May this issue of FACT Journal be one of the happy encounters that always happen in this wonderful season.

Turning over the pages you will find interesting information about the workshop "An Expanding Forum for Across the Curriculum Teaching" - its aims, achievements and the new ideas and theories which were shared in the sphere of teaching content through the medium of English. You will find the answer of the question "What is CELTA?" and why it is a teacher's challenge. Colleagues, who are interested in collaboration across the curriculum on issues of language and subject teaching, can find the internet addresses of two groups in this area. Do you want to join the Summer International School in Varna, Bulgaria? If the answer is yes, look for more information on page 11.

In this issue our colleagues share interesting ideas about how "profolio" can be used in Bulgarian language classes, how a biology lesson on biomes can provoke writing a travel story and how a Biology lesson can be done in the History Museum. Have you ever thought about making a discussion while teaching ecology in 10th class?

You have the unique chance to travel all over the world by the Travel Notes of Vesselina Gaidardgieva and after returning to Europe to understand why it is the continent where our students want to live and how they see the future of "this wonderful piece of land".

Enjoy the last issue of FACT Journal and Happy spring 2002!
